

Pamela Anita Mary Davis Bio

Pamela Anita Mary Davis, also known as the Queen of Resilience, resides in St. Louis, Mo and is a multi-faceted servant leader, speaker, HR professional, creative consultant, and the Founder and CEO of Queen of Resilience, Inc. Her humility and exceptional abilities make her a force ready to flourish and impact the world.

She believes that true Queens center their lives around God. With a captivating and sought-after speaking style, she brings spirit-filled energy, passionate fervor, and a colossal personality to every room, leaving a lasting impression on her audiences. Her personal mission revolves around guiding individuals towards finding resilience, unlocking their creativity, and embracing their authentic voice.

Pamela draws from a wealth of expertise in the human resource industry, encompassing credentialing and privileging, diversity and inclusion, recruitment and placement, and workers compensation. Pamela's skills foster a positive work environment, elevating morale and fostering growth.

In 2017, Pamela recognized the pressing need to increase mental health awareness in her community. Through unwavering dedication and perseverance, she founded Queen of Resilience, Inc. (QOR), a pivotal initiative offering support to women, especially those in college, enabling them to manage mental illnesses like anxiety and depression while developing self-awareness.

Pamela's has a bachelor's in healthcare management from Harris-Stowe State University and a masters in healthcare administration from Webster University. Her achievements have earned her recognition, such as the prestigious "Women Who Inspire" Award from Delux Magazine in 2019, and "Outstanding Alumni in Leadership" distinction from Harris-Stowe State University in 2022.

Beyond her professional endeavors, Pamela is a dedicated encourager, mentor, and advocate for women and youth, empowering them to flourish and embrace their true potential.