

Joy Womac Bio

Joy Womac began her career in criminal justice in the mid-90s and early 2000s living in Tennessee. Her experience spanned 11 years in corrections, patrol, private investigations, and internships with crime scene units and the U.S. National Central Bureau (Interpol).

She earned a bachelor's degree in Sociology with a concentration in Criminal Justice and was introduced to a 3-year internship with the U.S. Air Force. Thus, Ms. Womac switched to a logistics and transportation program that offered tuition reimbursement at the United States Transportation Command. In 2011, she settled in a GS-13 transportation specialist position and performed a voluntary tour in Iraq with the U.S. Army.

She completed her master's in International Relations as the tour ended. During her time, she earned various achievements including the Joint Civilian Service Commendation Award. Ms. Womac also completed a virtual internship with the State Department to expand her skillsets. Later, Joy pursued two additional degrees – an associate's in general science and a second master's in forensic psychology, working in various positions after leaving the U.S. Air Force.

Ms. Womac is actively involved in community projects and duties such as Toastmaster's Club at Scott AFB and the Federally Employed Women organization. Currently, she is an Illinois state investigator. She is interested in esoteric crimes and advanced sciences, especially assisting victims in their cases. Joy enjoys amateur photography, journalism, travel, and any diverse subjects that spark her interest.
